

The Future of Resident-Informed Property Design
Wednesday, December 2, 2020 2:00 – 3:30 EST
AGENDA

Welcome/Overview – Chuck Wehrwein

Objective of the Meeting: The COVID-19 pandemic, coupled with the impact of climate change and the renewed focus on addressing the needs of diverse populations are driving a nascent exploration of property and community design informed by real-life experience. Many members are beginning to look at design as a way to enhance resiliency and efficiency that cuts across all areas of community development from single- and multi-family development, the delivery of services, property operations and asset management, to cost containment and green and healthy building. We'll explore how members are taking steps to pave the way for implementing new approaches.

Topics for Discussion – All Participants

- Designing Trauma Resilient Communities
 - Discussion Starter: Julianna Stuart, VP Community Impact POAH Communities
 - Q&A and Peer Discussion
- Discussion – Musings on How Design Will Change Based on Recent Learnings
 - Discussion Starter: Kate Monter Durbin, CHN Housing Partners, Assistant Director
 - Q&A and Peer Discussion

Wrap-Up and Next Steps – Chuck Wehrwein